As Partner at LII of Seventy2 Capital Wealth Management, Eric Bost draws on his thirty years of industry experience to help clients understand their financial options and build their best future. He works primarily with families, integrating their activities, interests, passions and, above all else, the people they care for the most into their planning. Value based investing is a key cornerstone in Eric's expertise. After building LII into a successful independent practice, Eric partnered with Seventy2 Capital to give his clients enhanced resources and support.

Eric's specialties include alternative investments, retirement income strategies, asset preservation, and risk management through the lens of Socially Responsible Investing. He holds a Master of Business Administration in Finance and Economics from the University of Chicago Booth School of Business as well as his Chartered SRI Counselor designation. He is particularly experienced in assisting families that are coping with Alzheimer's Disease and related diseases.

Eric and his wife Jill live in Leesburg, Virginia, where they are raising twins, Alex and Katie, and their dogs, Roxy and Riley. Outside of the office, he enjoys traveling to new places in and out of the country, breaking out the grill, riffing on the guitar, and of course – baseball.
